ARCS Tools Workshop
Supporting Research Collaboration
QUT Gardens Point Campus - Gibson Room Z1064
3 May 2011, 9am - 3pm

Attend this event and see how ARCS' services can assist your research efforts

Research groups often face problems, especially when they need to work with others outside their institution. The issues caused by institutional barriers result in less than ideal working conditions - with lack of collaboration a likely result.

- Is your research team located in different places and find communication difficult?
- Does your team need to share data but access to a common data store is not available?
- Confused about "The Compute Cloud/Grid"?
- Do you use or are you interested in using computational or statistical analysis as part of your research?
- Do you find sharing resources with others outside your institution difficult due to security barriers?

Who Should Attend

- Researchers
- IT & Research Support Staff
- Research Students

Learn how eResearch can be of practical use to you. BRING YOUR LAPTOPS and let us help you enhance your productivity using ARCS Tools and services. Increasingly, researchers are finding that computer technology is becoming critical to their achieving collaborative research success.

Attend our complimentary event (which includes lunch) to see how quickly and easily we can help you overcome research obstacles. The events are suitable for both non-technical and technical audiences.

Determine how you can quickly transform the way you conduct research for increased efficiency and collaboration. For further information on the workshop see <http://www.questnet.net.au/>
